

Wet Tropics Welcomes new staff member

Wet Tropics welcomed Zoe Andolfatto to its Community and Partnerships program recently. Zoe was born in Papua New Guinea and moved to Babinda when she was 5 years old. After moving to Brisbane and then Melbourne, Zoe travelled overseas with her husband who works for a mining company.

She spent many years abroad in the United States, Europe, England and South America then moved back to Australia and settled in Gove in 2000. After moving to Gladstone in 2006, Zoe worked for the Department of Employment, Economic Development and Innovation as an Indigenous training support officer. She finally returned to Cairns in April after a 30 year absence and is now employed as a Wet Tropics Project Officer in Indigenous Partnerships.
